A conference chair that is comfortable to sit in for long periods of time. The combination of steel and leather gives the Blues chair an air of luxury without making it heavy, and the design echoes Art Deco translated into a modern design idiom.

Blues is available with a steam-bent shell in lacquered birch, walnut or oak. The cushions are detachable, and the chair is fitted with a metal swivel frame with return function. The armrests are covered in leather.

Functionality and beauty come together in this table, which in 1986, deservedly won the coveted Danish ID Design Award. The characteristic metal construction of the frame creates an appealing contrast to the ash tabletop. Only after closer examination do we see that the table has two flaps that can be folded out. The flaps are hidden underneath the table and are kept in place by a unique mechanism which is easy to use and which is also an integral part of the table design.

The Haugesen table measures 36 inches width and 74 ½ inches in length. With the flaps extended, the table reaches a length of ten feet.
